Upland eyeing major retail sales complex

By J. Rezendes-Herrick

Talks between city officials and a developer involved with the Cable Airport Redevelopment Project could result in a major retail sales complex on Upland's west end.

"Since this is a cornerstone project, there are critical concerns regarding landscaping traffic circulation, and the treatment of facades," said City Manager Ray Silver.

The Upland Community
Redevelopment Agency unanimously decided to pursue developing a 13-acre parcel at the southeast corner of Foothill Boulevard and Benson Avenue.
They chose Lincoln Property Co.
from a field of three firms to build the project and will be negotiating a contract governing construction.

"We'll be covering major areas where we want to accomplish things in the document," Silver said

Three developers presented proposals to the agency earlier. The Alexander Haagen Co. was particularly strong in responsiveness and raind use, while a partnership between Melvin Simon and Associates and the Metropolitan Real Estate Group offered very strong design, Silver said.

But Irvine-based Lincoln offered the best price for the city-owned property at $11.70 per square foot plus 10 percent of the net profits.

"Plus, they have three major (retail anchors) without using a drug store or supermarket," Silver said. "We know there is a demand for a drug store and a market and as we move along, we're reasonably assured of getting them. Here, we wanted to look at major retailers without getting a drug store or market."

The agency gave city staff 90 days to reach agreement with Lincoln on the project. The pact will govern Lincoln's development plans, identifying the three major retail outlets, compiling major financial data and devising market and managing plans for the project.

Once tentative agreement is reached, the pact will be brought before a joint hearing of the agency and the City Council.

Upland Police Reserve Sgt. Eric Steele has spent 7½ years volunteering for the reserve unit.

Police reserves in Upland proud but few in number

By J. Rezendes-Herrick

Police reserve Sgt. Eric Steele remembered times when he begrudgingly did his civic duty

"1982, Christmas Eve. That day, obviously, it was a lot harder to come out," Steele said. "You're basically always on call."

But the electronics engineer has spent 7½ years volunteering for the Upland Police Reserve Unit.

"I enjoy police work," said Steele, 32. "My regular job is a desk job and I enjoy getting out on the weekends and working in the community, working with the police department."

Steele's talents are in high demand of late. Upland's reserve force normally hovers at about 20 officers. But that has dropped to 14 officers and the department is putting together a recruiting drive.

"It's a constant battle," said Lt. Tom Barnhart, one of two reserve program coordinators. "The police department itself is short of manpower."

"If we didn't have them, they would be sorely missed," added former reserve coordinator Sgt. Tom Garner.

Fully-trained reserves are used in virtually every situation calling for full-time officers. The first officer to arrive at a recent homicide was a reserve. And on a recent night a major traffic collision drew the reserves in force to direct traffic and control the gathering crowd.

Fully-qualified reserves need at least 214 hours of police academy training and another 100 hours under an Upland training officer before they are certified to solo in patrol cars.

Many reservists use the program as a stepping stone to a full-time post.

Upland councilwoman resigns due to family

By J. Rezendes-Herrick

Upland Councilwoman Rosalie Kamansky resigned her post Feb. 26, citing family as the primary reason for her not seeking re-election in November.

"I've loved this job and I've loved being here," she said after the sparsely attended session concluded. "But it seemed like every time I've said (to husband Joseph Kamansky) let's go do this, we just didn t have the time."

Kamansky, 71, gave her resignation letter to Mayor Robert Nolan and her council colleagues shortly before the meeting. Nolan read the missive during the period of the agenda reserved for the officials' general statements.

The Kamanskys are partners in a real estate office and plan to

Victoria residents hope to bar gangs

By Larry Altman

Concerned that gangs are creeping into their upscale Rancho Cucamonga neighborhood, about 150 Victoria tract residents met with sheriff's officials Feb. 25 to learn how to stop them.

The gathering at Victoria Groves Park was prompted by a drive-by shooting Feb. 22 in the 11000 block of Amarillo street. No one was injured in the shooting.

"We want it safe for our kids," said Diane Forster, who

"I came right out of gang territory in Anaheim. It's good to stay updated."

few months ago.
On Feb. 22, a 17-year-old boy was walking into his house when a pickup truck drove by and made a U-turn. As the truck drove past the house, two or three shots were fired. The boy was not hit, but the home was struck twice, deputies said.

Lt. Bruce Zeiner, acting commander of the Rancho Cucamonga sheriff's station, told residents the shooting probably was not gang-related, although gang involvement has not been ruled out.

Sheriff's Lt. Bob Peppler said the 17-year-old apparently had some other people. Detectives are investigating the shooting and have some suspects in mind, he said.

Even though residents' minds were eased that gangs probably were not involved, residents still were afraid gangs would move into the neighborhood.

"I came right out of gang territory in Anaheim," said Elvira LaBauve, who wants to keep them out of her new neighborhood. "It's good to stay updated."

Sheriff's officials, including representatives of SMASH—

the San Bernardino County
Movement Against Street
Hoodlums— told them Rancho Cucamonga's gang problem was nothing like those in some surrounding cities but residents still need to join together to stop it from coming in.

"They are not desirable and we do not want them here," Zeiner said.

Deputies urged them to join Neighborhood Watch groups to look out for graffiti, as well as suspicious people and cars in the neighborhood.

Project has some in Upland up in arms

By J. Rezendes-Herrick

The Upland City Council ended years of wrangling and approved the final phase building plans for the Upland Hills Country Club recently.

The unanimous decision to approve the 104-unit condominium project came despite protests from the homeowners association that the proposed duplexes represent a downgrading of their country club ambiance.

"We got set up tonight. We got shut off," said association President Ralph Morris following the council hearing. "I'm so thoroughly ticked. We were not given a legitimate chance."

The project proposed by Prestige Homes of Culver City would place duplexes on each side of Upland Hills Drive North west of Tanglewood. Since the plans were proposed in September, the association has groused over what it claims are crowded dwellings, a lack of recreational and open space, and inadequate parking.

But Prestige's housing director Bruce Froehlich said the company has done all it could to meet the demands of city planners and requests from the neighborhood's original residents.

"At the last council meeting you directed that we go back to planning with the concern of additional parking," he said. "We now have additional spaces. At the suggestion of the council we met with the homeowners."

Councilman Thomas McGilloway recognized the efforts.

"They have improved the swimming pool, improved the parking," he said. "I would say there have been compromises on the developer's part in terms of increasing the quality of the project."

But Morris accused Prestige of ignoring the concerns of those already living in the area.

"He wants to build duplexes and we lose our open space and an additional swimming pool," he said. "He keeps what he wants and throws out the rest of the plan. We challenge the council to support our citizen's group and keep the kind of community we want."

Mayor Robert Nolan said: "It's such an emotional issue. It's unfortunate that we can't please everyone."

Councilwoman Donna Vandersall urged approval of the project and the council unanimously voted in favor of the plan.

Morris was uncertain about possible action by the association.

"I don't know. It is unfortunate," he said.

Morris added that the association has even dicussed a request that the residents of the final development phase form their own homeowners association separate from Upland Hills. And he hinted final action might come in November.

Supporters of rival measures seek support

By Lee Peterson

Midway through a statewide petition drive to qualify an environmental initiative for the November ballot, backers claim to be moving comfortably toward success.

Meanwhile a group sponsoring a competing pesticide regulation measure for a coalition of farm groups announced it would begin garnering signatures.

More than 425,000 Californians have signed the petition to qualify the Environmental Protection Initiative for the ballot, according to campaign spokesman Bob Mullholland.

Because signatures must be those of registered voters, initiative qualifying campaigns typically aim to gather more signatures than required. Mullholland and those working for the campaign must gather 372,178 names

"It's a slam dunk, it's the easiest campaign I've ever worked on," Mullholland said.

Sponsored by a coalition of environmental activist organizations and state Attorney General John Van de Kamp, the initiative tackles pesticides in food, ozone depletion, global warming and off-shore oil drilling.

If approved, state and local governments would pay millions of dollars for new regulation of environmental programs. There is a significant loss of tax revenue expected.

The environmental initiative signature drive began Nov. 28 and the group must submit the petitions by April 27.

Backers of an alternative measure, supported by Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said they expect to have to work hard to meet their May deadline for signatures for the Pesticide Regulation Initiative.

Spokesman Lee Stitzenberger said the group will start collecting the first names on the petition by circulation in county farm bureaus throughout the state. But he also expects urban support for his measure.

'Ours is the only initiative that does anything about the Medfly situation," noted Stitzenberger. The measure would call for doubling of sterile Medfly production and would set up research of malathion alternatives, he said.

Stitzenberger said the Environmental Protection Act of 1990 initiative takes an unreasonable eapproach.

continue devoting time to that business. But Joe Kamansky's heart bypass operation last year paved the way for the decision.

"Joe and I talked about it and we decided what to do as a family," she said. "We'd like to do some traveling. After all, we're not getting any younger." In her letter, Kamansky noted the many changes to take place in the city since her election in 1986. A new police station, a proliferation of water department construction projects and the progress made toward completing the Foothill (30) Freeway were praised.

But she said it was time to step down.

Kamansky is a native of Pomona and has lived in Upland since 1960. She served on the city's architectural review board before being appointed to the Planning Commission in 1979.

Sparse rain has state in the clutches of dry spell

Recent heavy storm wasn't enough

By Lee Peterson

Without heavy storms before the end of the wet season, the state faces one of the longest dry spells - four years - in recent history.

Southern Californians may have sloshed through a major storm in February, but it wasn't enough to quench the official drought forecast.

Nearly three inches of rain fell locally in February, most of that in a storm two weekends ago. Ski resorts reported 2 to 3 feet of snow in local mountains from the weekend tempest.

It wasn't enough.

'We are still roughly at one half of what would be considered normal for this time of year," said Bob Gomperz, spokesman for the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California. "That coupled with the last three years puts us in a precarious position.

Statewide snowpack is about 60 percent of normal, according to the California Water Resources Control Board.

In the short-term there is one positive note, the MWD recently received notice that it will get 100 percent of the water it requested from the board for the next year - 1.3 million acre feet. One-half acre foot is about the amount that an average household uses in one year.

Richard Hansen, general manager of the Three Valleys Municipal Water District, which Angeles County, said recent rainfall did little to replenish underground water supplies.

Come this summer, we will be right back in there and pumping the heck out of the basin," Hansen said.

About 70 percent of local water is imported through the Colorado River Aqueduct and the State Water Project.

These two sources of water can be restricted by political decisions which local water czars cannot influence, officials

MWD's Gomperz said that it won't be until May that the MWD can make the final determination of a drought year.

"Nothing is certain until the final forecast," he said.

Reserves/from B1

Garner said. "Some go out to see if it's what they really want to do. We have some who work jobs and make a lot of money, more than they would as a police officer. And we have some who look at it as a service organization.'

Barnhart said that whatever their motivation, the reservists are committed to the force.

"They're pretty dedicated people," he said. "Sometimes they are called out at a minute's notice. Sometimes they're (calls) mundane things but the reserves are very Steele finds some areas of work particularly difficult.

"I guess acting on some of the calls where you see (bad) family situations," he said. 'The children are there and it's a real bad environment and there's nothing you can do to make a serious impact.

Barnhart said the department's new recruiting drive is shooting to build the reserve force to 30 officers.

"We attend the police academies and put on recruitment programs. And we're in the planning stages of making a recruitment video," he said.

If the drive is successful. Barnhart wants to establish reserve teams that specialize in serving warrants and providing extra patrols in the city's higher crime areas.

The program costs the city more than $14,000 annually. In 1989, the reserves provided an additional 5,300 hours of work.

To be eligible for the program, candidates must be at least 21 years old and in good health. Applicants must go through physical testing, written and oral exams and background checks.

Interested applicants should call Barnhart or the personnel office at the Upland Police Department at 946-7624.

Supervisor says federal freeway designation a costly mistake

SAN BERNARDINO - The federal government made a costly mistake when it designated the proposed Foothill (30) Freeway a 'suburban route," 2nd District Supervisor Jon Mikels said

Mikels, who represents three of the cities through which the thoroughfare will pass, convinced the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors to support a resolution asking the Federal Highway Administration to reverse its decision.

He said he also would seek similar resolutions from the affected cities before meeting with U.S. Sen. Pete Wilson, R Calif., and Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-35th District, in two weeks.

Mikels said the designation would cut in half the number of proposed interchanges and hinder the freeway's ability to reduce Inland Valley gridlock. It also would nullify the valued at between $1 million and $2 million, Mikels said.

Federal officials use one of three designations to classify proposed highways - rural, suburban and urban. Plans have to conform to the designation to qualify for federal assistance.

A suburban designation calls for interchanges to be no closer than two miles apart. But plans call for interchanges on the Foothill (30) Freeway to be about

Glass firm receives OK on new signs

Montclair city planners approved plans recently for new signs in front of the renovated Dorst and Dryden Glass Contractor offices at 10419 Mills Ave.

The double-faced, nonilluminated sign will identify the company and its logos in dark green copy on a white background, Montclair Associate Planner Jim S. Lai said.

According to Lai, the company moved from its offices at 4186 Holt Blvd. after more than 15 years there. It received permission to renovate the Mills Avenue location in July 1989.

The Planning Commission approved the new sign unanimously, Lai added.

11/4 miles apart, which would be allowable only under the "urban" classification, Mikels said.

"They (federal officials) have no mathematical or technical definitions, they just eyeball it," Mikels said. "It should be based on traffic numbers."

He said traffic studies support his call for the urban designation. But the issue might be moot if things work out the way Mikels thinks they will.

Freeway planners can break the federal policy if they do not need the federal money, and with $400 million expected from the county's new half-cent sales tax, Mikels believes the project can get by without Uncle Sam's assistance.

"I don't want to eliminate the possibility," he added.

But Federal Highway Administration District Engineer Sue Klekar said officials have yet to designate the proposed freeway.

"There has been no decision on how far apart interchanges would be," she said. "We are still in the midst of working that out. ... Nothing is set in concrete yet."

Kerry Forsythe, deputy director of San Bernardino Associated Governments, agreed that the federal government has made no formal decision.
